INTRODUCTION

By JILLIAN EHNINGER

This project grew from a desire to expand the builders' hardware category of Lawrence B. Romaine's A Guide to American Trade Catalogs 1744–1900 and an aspiration to contribute an updated compilation to the resources available on hardware. Romaine's Guide, along with E. Richard McKinstry's Trade Catalogues at Winterthur: A Guide to the Literature of Merchandising 1750 to 1980, form the standard bibliography on the subject of trade catalogues, and both works have done much to raise awareness of catalogues and promote their collectibility. As Romaine wrote in 1960, "If a complete history of American manufactures is ever to be compiled, American trade catalogues will unquestionably be one of the most valuable sources of material available." Of his own work, he said, "If this volume encourages our library boards . . . to recognize these invaluable records, and to provide funds and staffs to take care of them, not stored in boxes and cartons and trunks, unchecked, but rather properly catalogued and shelved where historians can find them, I shall feel amply paid for the time and effort that has gone into it."¹ This project endeavors to continue Romaine's goal, in a more specialized fashion, tracing the location, date, and description of hardware manufacturers' trade catalogues.

If limited research material exists on the topic of trade catalogues in general, even less is written about hardware and hardware manufacturers. Perhaps one explanation is that the term itself is problematic; "hardware" can refer to a broad range of metalwork items. Consider, for example, the many diverse objects sold in the current-day "hardware store." For the purposes of this Guide to Architectural & Builders' Hardware Research Material, the term "hardware" is limited primarily to non-ferrous metalwork attached to openings in architecture and on furniture, or applied to the same for ornamentation.

The term "hardware trade catalogue" is defined as any volume published by manufacturers, wholesalers, or retailers showing printed patterns of hardware intended to promote their sale, usually incorporating stock numbers and prices. The term "trade catalogue" derived from the expression "to the trade," meaning trade directed toward wholesalers and retailers only, but usage of the term evolved to include catalogues targeted at consumers as well.² For the purposes of this Guide, trade catalogues are considered distinct from hand-made drawings in pen or pencil, auction catalogues, and newspaper and directory advertisements.

Some notable exceptions to the general lack of scholarship on hardware are Early Locks and Lockmakers of America by Thomas F. Hennessy in 1976 (revised and reprinted twice), An Annotated Bibliography for the Study of Building Hardware by Peter J. Priess in 1978, the reprinted Illustrated Catalogue of American Hardware of the Russell and Erwin Manufacturing Company of 1865 by Lee H. Nelson and the Association for Preservation Technology in 1980, and Theodore R. Crom's chapter, "Birmingham Brass Catalogues," in his Trade Catalogues 1542 to 1842 of 1989. These works provided the basis and background for A Guide to Architectural & Builders' Hardware Research Material. Hennessy contributed one of the cornerstones for the project, giving "an historical account of the development of locks and the lock industry in America" and providing a list of many early companies.³ The bibliography Priess compiled is updated here to include relevant works published since 1978. The history Nelson outlined in his introduction to the Russell and Erwin reprint supplies the context for hardware trade catalogues and Crom's chapter details their early beginnings in England.

Hardware trade catalogues originated in England in the middle of the 18th century as manufacturers in Birmingham, Liverpool, and Sheffield sought to expand their markets in America and Europe. The early trade catalogues contained copper-plate engravings, usually drawn to scale with corresponding stock numbers and prices. Most 18th and early 19th century catalogues were intentionally anonymous; middlemen merchants withheld the identity of suppliers, preventing overseas customers from ordering directly from individual foundries. A substantial number of early English hardware catalogues survive today in rare book collections at the Winterthur Museum, the Victoria and Albert, the Cooper-Hewitt, the Essex and Peabody, and the Metropolitan, many with histories of ownership in America.⁴

The hardware industry expanded rapidly throughout the Industrial Revolution and this expansion, together with advances in printing, book binding, and publishing, eventually produced a new kind of trade

Crom, Trade Catalogues 1542 to 1842 (Melrose, Florida: Privately Printed, 1989); Nicholas Goodison, "The Victoria and Albert Museum's Collection of Metal-work Pattern Books," Furniture History, vol. catalogue. Beginning around 1830, the American hardware industry began to assert itself in direct competition with English and other foreign manufacturers. In America especially, hardware companies and catalogues proliferated in the latter half of the 19th century. Rapidly changing business practices caused a shift away from the marketing system of middlemen merchants to direct sale from company sample rooms and warehouses. The catalogues themselves demonstrate these changes.

As Lee H. Nelson describes, “during the mid-1830s there was a noticeable increase in the quantity, variety, and quality of domestic production, together with an increase in the number & scope of American hardware dealers.” The American version of the English hardware trade catalogue did not appear, however, until the 1850s. “Most of these early American hardware catalogs were quite different from their English antecedents, that is, they were all conspicuously identifiable by maker, place, and date. . . . Thus, the illustrated American hardware catalogs had their origins, partly from the English prototypes, but mostly to serve an extraordinarily rapid business growth and . . . the wholesale commission merchants and jobbers in the United States.”⁵

Prosperity and expansion in the hardware industry continued until the end of the 19th century. The atmosphere was one of fierce competition and increasing specialization; many companies of this era regularly produced catalogues with over 1000 pages. American manufacturers exported large volumes of hardware to Europe, Mexico, South Africa, Turkey, and other countries, a phenomenon documented by many surviving catalogues written in foreign languages. The number of hardware trade catalogues published by American manufacturers increased substantially after 1850, and the quantity continued to multiply especially after the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition of 1876.

Historians have conducted very little research on French hardware manufacturers,⁶ and very few primary documents relating to the topic have come to light. However, French metalworkers have traditionally been celebrated for their high quality craftsmanship and sophisticated designs, whereas the strengths of their English and American counterparts have generally been mass production techniques and marketing strategies.

⁵ Lee H. Nelson, Illustrated Catalogue of American Hardware of the Russell and Erwin Manufacturing Company. Reprint of 1865 edition. (Washington, D.C.: The Association for Preservation Technology, 1980), pp. viii–vix.

⁶ A few important publications dealing with French bronzework in general should be noted here: Alfred de Champeaux, Dictionnaire des Fondeurs, Ciseleurs, Modeleurs en Bronze et Doreurs depuis le Moyen Age jusqu’à l’époque actuelle (Paris and London, 1886), completion of sections A through C only; Louis J. Gras, Essai sur l’histoire de la quincaillerie et petite métallurgie (St. Étienne, 1904); Penelope Hunter-Stiebel, Elements of Style: The Art of the Bronze Mount in 18th and 19th Century France (New York: Rosenberg & Stiebel, Inc., 1984); James Parker, “Louis XVI Gilt Bronze Ornament,” The Metropolitan Museum of Art Bulletin, vol. 112 (November 1953), pp. 57–59; Pierre Verlet, Les Bronzes Dorés Français du XVIIIe Siècle (Paris: Grands Manuels Picard, 1987); Pierre Verlet, “Mounts in the Wallace Collection,” Burlington Magazine (June 1950), pp. 154–157; and F. J. B. Watson, “Puzzles and Problems in French Furniture Mounts,” Apollo (March 1972), pp. 196–200.

Since well before the 18th century, French designs set the standard, and artisans of other nationalities imitated French style. Aside from period hardware objects themselves, trade catalogues sometimes provide the only primary documentation on French metalworking known to survive. The Musée des Arts Decoratifs in Paris contains a few early 19th century hand-colored catalogues depicting hardware items. Later 19th century printed hardware manufacturers' catalogues survive in greater numbers in various collections and many are listed in this Guide.

Providing a significant addition to the historical record, various hardware businesses produced histories of their own, usually to commemorate a company anniversary or other special occasion. Such books were usually created primarily as marketing tools, but many contain valuable historical information nonetheless. For example, John B. Comstock wrote a History of the House of P. & F. Corbin in 1904, Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company commemorated 50 Years of Successful Industry, 1868–1918 in 1918, the New Jersey Zinc Company compiled The First Hundred Years of the New Jersey Zinc Company in 1948, F. Charters Kelly authored 75 Years of Hibbard Hardware, The Story of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. in 1930, the Bridgeport Brass Company contributed Seven Centuries of Brass Making in 1920, and Vincent J. M. Eras, managing director of Lips Safe and Lock Manufacturing company, wrote Locks and Keys Throughout the Ages in 1957. One of the most important and influential trade-related publications was Henry Towne's Locks and Builders' Hardware: A Handbook for Architects (1904).

Many disciplines today can benefit from using surviving trade catalogues and company histories as valuable primary resources. These documents provide commercial, aesthetic, and technological contexts for hardware and other manufactured goods. Romaine described trade catalogues as “the backbone of business history,” an apt analogy given the many types of information contained within one cover.⁷ For business and social history, catalogues can present a wealth of material regarding industrial and technological improvements, distribution and consumption patterns, and the evolution of trademarks. In addition, scholars can trace changes in marketing and advertising practices through the years. For cultural history, catalogues can supply documentation for the decorative arts in general (and metalworking in specific), historic architecture and period interiors, and printing and graphic design developments. Professionals and students in the fields of architecture, interior design, preservation, and restoration can find pertinent information in numerous catalogue illustrations as well as explanatory text. Designers of historic reproductions often consult trade catalogues for inspiration and design specifics; collectors frequently use trade catalogues to document, date, and determine the function of objects in their collections. Hardware study collections help increase our understanding of materials, finishes, assembly of individual pieces, and the way different parts related to the whole.⁸

In order to best serve these diverse interests, the Guide to Architectural & Builders' Hardware Research Material is divided into three sections: first, a list of library, museum, and private collections of trade catalogues and hardware objects; second, a catalogue of trade catalogues held in the various collections; and third, a hardware bibliography including periodicals, separately published articles, and unpublished papers and theses. Following the bibliography is a separate list of ephemeral and other hardware-related items in the E. R. Butler & Co. Research Library, such as correspondence, invoices, trade cards, post cards, drawings, photographs, prints, advertisements and promotional items.

The "Guide" contains two major geographic categories: United States; and all other countries. Within the latter category the catalogues are catalogued alphabetically by country, including Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Spain, and Sweden. Within each geographic section, the catalogues are listed alphabetically by company name and then chronologically by the date of the catalogue. Each catalogue entry contains: the company name (in bold face upper case type); the location of the company; the founding date and any known historical or chronological information about the company; the date of the catalogue; the title of the catalogue (in italics); the location code(s); the value and date of purchase (if known); a concise description of the catalogue's contents; and specific physical information on the number of pages, size, and binding material. Entries which contain lists or descriptions of multiple copies always refer to items in the E. R. Butler & Co. Research Library unless otherwise noted. Symbol codes for the various collections are listed on pp. 16–18 of The Guide.

One collection symbol code appears quite frequently in the Guide: "NNERB" for E. R. Butler & Co. in New York, New York. This collection serves as an integral part of a current-day hardware firm specializing in the manufacture, distribution, importation, and finishing of fine decorative and builders' hardware. Mr. Butler and his clients frequently consult period trade catalogues for design inspiration, but his desire to preserve these documents and the history they represent was an equally strong motivation for forming the collection. In large part, the Guide to Architectural & Builders' Hardware Research Material serves as a catalogue of the E. R. Butler & Co. Research Library, which has a very broad scope, including: builders' hardware; railings and balustrades; decorative ironwork; decorative metal roofing; fountains, garden ornaments and statuary; jewelry; utensils and silverware; lighting fixtures of all kinds; plumbing fixtures; hardware for furniture; hardware for conveyances of all kinds; and hardware for refrigerators, radios, record players, pianos, and caskets. Adding information about related collections, as well as a hardware bibliography, expands the role of the Guide from a collectors' catalogue to a work with wider applications.

Other private collectors have made similar contributions to the young but growing field of hardware research. In many instances, collectors form the "first line of defense" in an area not yet examined by academia. The research conducted by collectors and dealers, and the information presented by their supporting associations often provide the first foundations in a new field. Maud L. Eastwood, one such collector who is also an author, exemplifies this phenomenon. Eastwood wrote three books to increase knowledge and raise interest in one specialized area of hardware: antique doorknobs.⁹ Eastwood has a sizable collection of antique doorknobs, a type of collectible that has become increasingly popular. Curiosity about her collection motivated Eastwood's research and she became one of the first to investigate the history of 19th century hardware and to write on the topic. Five years after her first publication, a group of collectors met and founded The Antique Doorknob Collectors of America, an organization of like-minded collectors who hold yearly conventions and seminars to share knowledge about "collecting and preservation of antique doorknobs and related hardware."

Maud Eastwood's knowledge and assistance proved extremely valuable to the present project, as did the cooperation of numerous other collectors and institutions. By consequence, attentive readers will note that catalogue entries from the different collections are occasionally inconsistent. Because information was gathered from correspondence, catalogue cards, computer records, and dealers' descriptions, the details of these entries necessarily vary with the different interests and cataloguing methodology of each collector, museum, and library. Many times, record keeping for a given collection was still in progress, the catalogues having been set aside until funds, staff members, and sufficient blocks of time became available. Similarly, it is not possible here to definitively list all of the hardware trade catalogues known to survive. This listing is intended as a guide to the researcher. The project represents a beginning effort to document the history of hardware manufacturing before it becomes lost, and the intention was to compile a list of resources in one convenient reference work and to promote researchers' interest in the topic.

GLOSSARY AND LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

Bindings:

bd.	boards (paper-covered heavy cardboard, usually with a cloth- or leather-covered spine)
bkrm.	buckram (a wide-weave cloth binding commonly used by libraries)
cl.	cloth (cloth-covered cardboard)
comb binding	a loose-leaf binding in which holes are punched in the gutter margins of leaves, which are then held in place by a strip of plastic (or sometimes bent wire) consisting of curved “teeth” (not to be confused with spiral binding, in which the leaves are held in place by a single spiral coil of metal or plastic)
half binding	binding in which the spine and corners are covered with a different material from the rest of the binding, i.e., “half-leather” or “half-cloth.” See also quarter binding.
lea.	leather
leatherette	a simulated leather binding.
mor.	morocco (a goatskin leather with a distinctive grain)
quarter binding	a binding in which the spine is covered with a different material from the rest of the binding wrap(s) or wrapper(s)	a paper binding usually of a heavier stock than the text pages (usually referred to as paperbound, paperback, or softbound), which is an integral part of a book, not to be confused with dust jacket or dust wrapper, which is an unattached paper covering used to protect the binding of a book.
blind stamp	An ownership mark made by a die. Ownership marks can also be made by an inked rubberstamp or a perforating stamp.
blind-stamped	A binding that has been decorated or lettered (“stamped” by machine or hand) without the use of gold or coloring. If gold has been stamped into the binding, the binding is said to be “stamped in gilt” or “gilt-stamped.”
book sizes	(approx. dimensions):
folio (2 ^o)	13 inches and taller
quarto (4to or 4 ^o)	12 x 9 inches
octavo (8vo or 8 ^o)	8¾ x 5½ inches
duodecimo (12mo or 12 ^o)	7½ x 5 inches
sextodecimo (16mo or 16 ^o)	6¾ x 4¼ inches
vicesimo-quarto (24mo or 24 ^o)	5½ x 3½ inches
tricesimo-secundo (32mo or 32 ^o)	4¾ x 3¼ inches

Note: the terms “folio,” “quarto,” etc. describe the format of a book, i.e., the number of times a printed sheet is folded in order to form the leaves of a book.

booklet	a small book of few pages. See also pamphlet; brochure.
broadside	a large sheet of paper usually printed on one side only, used for proclamations, announcements, advertisements, etc. Sometimes folded, but usually not folded.
broadsheet	synonymous with “broadside,” however more properly used to describe the size and format for newspapers rather than the tabloid format of the broadside.
brochure	from brocher (to stitch); thus, a small booklet, usually of several leaves stitched or fastened together but not bound; synonymous with pamphlet (see).
ca.	circa
circular	leaflet (see)
cm.	centimeter (2.45 to the inch)
co.	company
col.	color
col(s)	column(s)
cvrs.	covers
dec.	decorated
desc.	description, descriptive
diag(s)	diagram(s)
ed.	edition, editor, edited by
ellipsis	indicated by three dots
enc.	enclosed
endpapers	the double leaves at the front and back of a book consisting of the leaf that is pasted to the inner cover (the front or rear “pastedown”) and the leaf that is adjacent to the pastedown (the “front free endpaper” or “ffep” and the “rear free endpaper” or “rfep”), not to be confused with the flyleaf (see).
est.	established
ffep	front free endpaper
fld.	folding
flyer	an advertising circular for mass distribution. See also handbill and leaflet.

flyleaf	a blank leaf following the front free endpaper (sometimes used interchangeably with “front free endpaper”).
folder	a single printed sheet with one or more folds, thus creating several pages (not to be confused with leaflets, flyers, circulars, and handbills, which are usually not folded).
frs.	frontispiece: an illustration at the front of a book, usually facing the title page, often called a "frontis."
gathering	a book's pages are printed on single sheets and then folded to the size of the book. The resulting folded pages are called a "gathering," quire, section, or signature.
glt.	gilt
gutter	the inside margins of two facing pages
handbill	a small printed sheet to be distributed by hand. See also leaflet; circular; flyer. Not to be confused with a broadside or broadsheet, which are larger in size.
ill(s), illus.	illustrated, illustrations leaflet	a single sheet (usually 11 x 8½ or smaller), unfolded or folded once, not to be confused with a broadside (see). Synonymous with flyer or circular.
lg.	large
loose-leaf	Any type of binding in which holes are punched in the margins, thus allowing the easy removal or insertion of leaves.
loose	a book that is so worn or shaken that the pages have come loose.
mfg.	manufacture(d) (rs)
ms(s)	manuscript(s)
n.d.	no date
no.	number
n.p.	no place or no publisher listed
offprint	a separate printing of a section from a larger publication
orig.	original
ownership marks	An ownership mark on the page of a book made by an inked rubberstamp, a perforating stamp, or a blind stamp created by the impression of a die.
p-, pp.	page, pages

pamphlet	an unbound publication with few pages and no cover (originally limited in size to 32 octavo pages by the Stamp Act of 1712). See also brochure, booklet.
pastedown pat.	the half of the endpaper pasted to the inside of a book's cover. patent(ed)
pict.	pictorial
p.l.	preliminary leaf or leaves (a leaf or leaves at the front of a book, frequently unnumbered, usually comprising the half-title, frontispiece, title page, dedication, preface, foreword, introduction, table of contents, etc.); not to be confused with the endpapers or flyleaf (see).
pl.	plate
port(s)	portrait(s)
portfolio	a cover or case that houses loose pages or sheets.
ptd.	printed
r	reprint
rfep	rear free endpaper
ref.	reference
resp.	respectively
rev.	revised
sewn	pamphlets or thin books in which the gathering or gatherings have been sewn vertically.
sm.	small
spec(s)	specification(s)
sq.	square
stabbed	a thin book, pamphlet, or part-issue (a book issued in installments or parts) that has been sewn through sideways, usually in two stabbed holes.
unbd.	unbound
v.d.	various dates
vol(s)	volume(s)
w.m.	watermark (a mark or device in a sheet of paper to identify the manufacturer of the paper; visible when held up to light).

The John M. Mossman Lock Collection consists of all types of locks, predominantly from 1850 to c.1912, as well as some older and foreign examples.

The John M. Mossman Lock Collection constitutes the main exhibit within the museum of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen. This collection represents one of the most complete anthologies of locks in the United States. Here, more than 370 examples trace the history of the lock, from ancient wooden locks, four thousand years old, to modern 20th-century time locks. The collection is highly specialized, featuring primarily bank and vault locks. Many of the examples are unique, made-to-order locks that were not produced in commercial quantities. Nearly every lock in this collection has protected untold millions in money and securities. In addition to the numerous locks, there are exceptional examples of old keys and locksmiths' tools. To augment the lock collection Mr. Mossman donated his notes and scrapbooks, known as the Mossman Papers, which have proven to be a valuable resource for the study of locks. It is the mission of this museum to present one of the most fascinating sidelights on an industry which is peculiarly American. To assist the viewer, a wonderful hardcover book, The Lure of the Lock has been produced which gives a concise history of lock making and describes each lock in the collection. These will be loaned to visitors and are available for purchase.

BAKER & HAMILTON BUILDERS’ HARDWARE CO. (D)

San Francisco, California

Founded 1849.

Lured by the California Gold Rush, Livingston L. Baker and Robert M. Hamilton traveled to Mormon’s Island in 1849 where they worked for James L. L. F. Warren in his general supply and miner’s hardware store. Four years later, Baker and Hamilton bought Warren’s interest in the business and renamed it Baker & Hamilton. After moving to Sacramento, the company shifted its supply from miner’s hardware to general hardware, agricultural implements and seeds.

Livingston Baker and Robert Hamilton deserve credit for founding one of the first and most successful hardware companies in California and also for facilitating the establishment of other West Coast hardware businesses. After importing hardware and farming implements from the East Coast for 15 years, Baker & Hamilton opened a factory for the production of farming implements in 1868. They manufactured tools better suited for use in California soil. The company issued the first hardware and implement catalog on the Pacific Coast in 1874. Baker & Hamilton helped organize the California Hardware Metal Board of Trade to maintain fair prices and protect customers as well as the Traffic Association of California and the Merchants’ Shipping Association to confront high transportation costs caused by the railroad monopoly.

Baker & Hamilton continued to expand during the last decades of the 19th century as evidenced by its markets in Hawaii, Alaska, Eastern Asia and Australia. The devastating earthquake and fires of 1906 demolished Baker & Hamilton’s buildings but not the company’s stability that permitted it to rebuild and open a building of 250,000 square feet in San Francisco in 1907. Competition with East Coast and Mid-West implement manufacturers eventually forced Baker & Hamilton to sell its implement factory in 1914. However, the company remained strong and managed to merge with one of its main California competitors, Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., in 1918. The company was renamed Baker, Hamilton & Pacific.

CHICAGO HARDWARE MFG. CO. (M)

Chicago, Illinois
 Founded 1878; closed 1906.

The Chicago Hardware Manufacturing Company changed its name to Chicago Hardware Company in 1906, but its origins and greatest period of activity are associated with the name Niles. Milton Cleveland Niles, farmer, school director, builder and community leader in South Waukegan, Illinois, founded Niles & Son in 1878 for the manufacture and sale of his patented lock sets. F. T. June and J. D. Hughes joined Niles to incorporate the Gray Iron Company, renamed the Chicago Hardware Manufacturing Company in 1882.

The company’s new name and Nile’s Mortise Door Knobs and Locks, patented in 1882, inaugurated a successful era that lasted twenty years. Niles’ knobs and locks, fabricated with a minimum number of parts, were promoted as easily and securely fastened, thoroughly tested and attractively designed. In addition to Niles’ reliable products, the Chicago Hardware Manufacturing Company offered custom design orders in a variety of materials, styles and finishes. It was one of two companies (the other, Yale & Towne) using the Bower-Barff process of oxidized iron finish. A publicity effort including production of catalogs in 1888 and 1895 encouraged the company’s growth. Buildings furnished with Chicago Hardware products during this period include the Schiller Building in Chicago by Adler & Sullivan (1892), the Federal Building in Chicago by Henry Ives Cobb (1898–1905) and the Pabst Building in Milwaukee, Wisconsin by S. S. Beman (1894).

 The Chicago Hardware Company acquired the Barrows Lock Company in 1906. Charles Warner Sager began phasing out the Chicago Hardware Company line, including Niles' screwless spindle self adjusting knobs and locks, possibly due to its incompatibility with other lines, the shifting preference of builders or competitors' unit locks. The company was renamed Sager Lock Company in 1913.

CORBIN, WHITING & CO.

New Britain, Connecticut

Founded 1850.

Edward Doen sold his interest in Doen, Corbin & Co. to Henry W. Whiting in 1849. The name of the company was changed to Corbin, Whiting & Co., and a policy was established to manufacture products not already produced in the United States in order to reduce competition with other American companies. The name of Corbin, Whiting & Co. was changed to P. & F. Corbin in 1852.

Ref. Hennessy, 3rd ed., p. 34.

P. & F. CORBIN (M)

New Britain, Connecticut

Originally founded in 1849 as Doen, Corbin; name changed to Corbin, Whiting, & Co. in 1849. Became P. & F. Corbin on Jan. 1, 1852.

Ref. Hennessy, 3rd ed., p. 34.

P. & F. Corbin's slogan of 1929, "Good Buildings Deserve Good Hardware," affirms the quality of its products, for Corbin hardware is found in the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., Radio City Music Hall and Grand Central Station in New York City and the King's Palace in Bangkok, Thailand among many other well-known structures around the world.

In addition to a complete line of builder's hardware, P. & F. Corbin produced coffin hardware, wooden screws, cabinet locks, decorative hardware, a "Harvard" line of mortise locks with pin tumbler cylinders and hand grenades during World War I. One of Corbin's specialty products was the Unit Lock invented by Byron Phelps at the turn of the century.

The growth of the company is measured by its continuous and rapid building of facilities as well as its growing number of employees until P. & F. Corbin was referred to as the largest hardware manufacturer in the world in 1900. Still, it managed to grow upon its merger with Russell & Erwin Manufacturing Company in 1902 to form the American Hardware Corporation, a holding company.

- 1867 Ill. catalog of hardware. CtLMA 130 pp., 6 x 10.
 "In 1867, a cloth-bound, fully illustrated catalogue of goods was issued. It was a much more ambitious book than had previously been attempted, requiring a full new set of wood cuts. So good were these cuts that a number of them were used as late as the 1895 edition. Butts were brought from the back of the book to the front, where they have always remained. Many new forms of bolts were seen. The slide bell pulls now sold were shown. Sash fasteners of a pattern now obsolete, bed-keys, toilet screws, picture nails, curtain fixtures, and hat hooks of shapes that would now be thought strange, mark the advance made in some directions since the book was issued. Some of the goods were quite ornamental – for instance, several styles of coat and hat hooks made by drawing a fancy knurled brass rod over a steel wire, bending it to shape and tipping it with porcelain knobs. Twenty-six of the one hundred and thirty-two pages were devoted to coffin trimmings, many of them very elaborate in design. . . . It was not until 1868, however, that locks and knobs were added to the assortment and a definite attempt made to put upon the market a complete line of builders' hardware.”

– Comstock, p. 53.

The first lock list was published in 1869, and in 1871 “a lock list of 320 pages was required to catalogue these goods [locks and latches] . . .” – Comstock, p. 54.

CORBIN CABINET LOCK CO. (M)

New Britain, Connecticut

"In 1879, Corbin ventured into the cabinet lock field. A special department was set up for this purpose under the direction of N. G. Miller. . . . On May 1, 1882, Corbin moved its sales office from 55 Beekman Street, New York City, to larger quarters at 24-26 Murray Street in that city. In 1882, Corbin's Cabinet Lock Department had grown to such an extent it was decided to set up a new company for this line, called the Corbin Cabinet Lock Co." – Hennessy, 3rd ed., p. 36.

EAGLE LOCK CO. (M)

Terryville, Connecticut

Established 1833, incorporated 1854, chartered 1882, sold to Bowser Corporation in 1943.

The origins of the Eagle Lock Company extend to the earliest production of locks in the United States. In 1833, Eli Terry, Jr., Stephen G. Bucknall (an English locksmith), John C. Lewis and William E. McKee founded Lewis, McKee & Co. to make cabinet locks. The Eagle Lock Company resulted from the merger of James Terry Co. and Lewis Lock Co. which occurred after a complex succession of companies in Terryville and elsewhere. (See Lewis, McKee & Co; Lewis & Gaylord Co.; Lewis Lock Co.; Bucknall, McKee Co.; Goodwin, McKee & Williams Co.; Williams, McKee & Co.; James Terry & Co. and Walsh Lock Co.)

The Eagle Lock Company successfully confronted competition during its long history. In the late 1830s, the company adjusted its lock designs to better suit the needs of the American market, which lock makers in England then dominated. As one of the first companies to use the power press during the 1840s, it produced locks more efficiently and at a lower cost than English lock makers.

The Eagle Lock Company confronted its American competitors by purchasing the following companies in 1877: Walsh Lock of Newark, NJ; Eccentric Lock Co.; American Lock Co. of Cazenovia, NY; Gaylord, Mix & Co. of Pequabuck, CT; Bridgeport Lock Co. of Bridgeport, CT; W. & E. T. Fitch of New Haven, CT and Crouch & Fitzgerald of New York. Following these acquisitions, the Eagle Lock Company arrived at its greatest period of activity as measured by construction of new company buildings and housing for employees. This period culminated about 1922 when Eagle employed 1800 people and furnished customers with nickel silver “gold plated” keys for their pin tumbler locks.

LEWIS, MCKEE & CO.

Terryville, Connecticut

Founded 1833.

Eli Terry, Jr. and Stephen G. Bucknall (an English locksmith) – with the financial backing of John C. Lewis and William E. McKee – founded Lewis, McKee & Co. in 1833, the first cabinet lock company in the United States. The assets of Lewis, McKee & Co. were sold to John C. Lewis & Sereno Gaylord who renamed the company Lewis & Gaylord Co. in 1841.
Ref. Hennessy.

LEWIS & GAYLORD CO.

Terryville, Connecticut

Founded 1841

After the death of Eli Terry, Jr., the assets of Lewis, McKee & Co. were sold to John C. Lewis & Sereno Gaylord who renamed the company Lewis & Gaylord Co. in 1841. Lewis & Gaylord was one of the first companies to use the power press which permitted it to compete with English manufacturers. In 1845, Lewis & Gaylord in conjunction with Williams, McKee & Co. produced 42,000 dozen locks with 38 employees.
Ref. Hennessy.

LEWIS LOCK CO.

MALLORY, WHEELER & CO.

New Haven, Connecticut
Founded 1834.

The founding of Mallory, Wheeler & Co. can be traced to the origins of both Pierpont-Hotchkiss Company (see Pierpont-Hotchkiss Co.; Pierpont, Mallory & Co.; Davenport, Mallory & Lockwood and Davenport, Mallory & Co.) and Peck & Dewey Company (see Peck & Dewey Co.; Peck & Walter Co.; Peck & Walter Mfg. Co.; J. B. Sargent & Co. and Sargent & Co.)

Mallory, Wheeler & Co. went bankrupt in 1913 due to heavy competition with other companies and patent infringement suits. However, the company established an impressive reputation during its years of operation. It manufactured outstanding builders' hardware and door furniture, received patents for knob patterns as well as a reversible knob latch and won awards for its locks from the American Institute in New York and the Exposition Universelle in Paris.

1871 Door Locks, Knobs, Padlocks, Etc., Illustrated and Described NNERB (2)
One of the great American hardware trade catalogs, DeWint featuring a wide variety of rim locks, mortise locks, doorknobs, lever handles, shutter and drawer knobs, bell pulls and bell sets, escutcheons, hinges, keys, and padlocks. Illustrated throughout with extremely fine illustrations printed in black, gold, bronze, and silver, with full credit given on the copyright page to the "Workmanship of the Hutchings Printing House, in Hartford, Conn."
Additional credit given to A. P. Norman, Draughtsman, New York City; Tarbell & Sanford, Engravers, West Meriden, Conn.; Seymour
Paper Co., New York; Geo. Mather's Sons, Manufacturers of Printing
Inks and Bronzes, New York; and R. Hoe & Co.'s New Stop Cylinder Wood Cut Presses, New York.
Instructions are given on p. 8 by the printer on the best way to view the catalog: "To produce the proper effect of bronzes used upon this work to represent the various metals, the book should be exhibited in a strong light."

PIERPONT - HOTCHKISS CO.

New Haven, Connecticut

Founded 1834.

Asabel Pierpont and John Hotchkiss established Pierpont-Hotchkiss Co. in 1834. John Hotchkiss received the first patent for a mortise latch in the U.S.; his company was also the first to offer a mineral doorknob. Burton Mallory purchased his assets in 1843 and the company was renamed Pierpont, Mallory & Co.

PIERPONT, MALLORY & CO.

New Haven, Connecticut

Founded 1843.

Pierpont, Mallory & Co. was established from the assets of Pierpont-Hotchkiss Co. after John Hotchkiss' interest was purchased by Burton Mallory in 1843. Following a series of expansions, Pierpont, Mallory & Co. was considered one of the largest lock companies in the United States by 1851. When Mr. Lockwood joined the company as a partner in 1858, its name was changed to Davenport, Mallory & Lockwood.

RUSSELL & ERWIN MFG. CO. (M)

New Britain, Connecticut
Founded 1849.

"On January 1, 1839, Frederick Stanley and his two younger associates, Henry E. Russell and Cornelius B. Erwin, became partners and the firm was named Stanley, Russell & Co." (Hennessy, 3rd ed., p. 29). Russell & Erwin Manufacturing Company was incorporated in 1851 following 20 years during which F. T. Stanley evolved through a succession of name changes and reorganizations. (See F. T. Stanley Co.; Stanley, Woodruff Co.; Stanley, Russell & Co. and Matteson, Russell & Co.)

Following the Civil War, Russell & Erwin grew rapidly. In 1869, the company's facilities covered an expanse of five and a half acres with twenty-five tenement houses for operators. It used nine and a half tons of Scotch and American iron daily and four casks of copper weekly. The company already maintained offices and warehouses around the United States prior to the war, but it opened its lines to the foreign market during the 1860s. It won many medals for its products at exhibitions around the world from France to Australia.

Russell & Erwin's employment of the prolific hardware inventor Henry C. Voight and designers George Barkentin, Rudolph Christensen, Ludwig Kreuzinger was one way in which the company validated its slogan, "Times Change and We Change with Them." It manufactured products of excellent quality and design, especially its ornamental lines of 1875 and 1920. After obtaining the patents and exclusive rights to Metallic Compression Casting Company's process for casting metals under pressure in 1872, Russell & Erwin led the way in production of ornamental hardware. Introduced the Unit Lock, invented by Henry Voight, in 1904. During the 1920s and 1930s, Russell & Erwin produced Art Deco designs which suited newly constructed setback buildings.

Russell & Erwin and P. & F. Corbin merged to form a holding company, the American Hardware Corporation in 1902. In 1964 The American Hardware Corporation was purchased by The Emhart Co. of Bloomfield, Connecticut. Ref. Hennessy.

J. B. SARGENT & CO. (M)

New Britain, Connecticut

Founded 1857.

Sargent & Co. acted as sales agents for Peck & Walter Co. When Peck & Walter Co. closed in 1857 due to bankruptcy, Joseph Sargent moved Sargent & Co. to New Britain and established J. B. Sargent & Co. The company was moved to New Haven and incorporated as Sargent & Co. in 1864.

SARGENT & CO. (M)

New Haven, Connecticut

Founded 1852.

In 1852, Joseph B. Sargent and Edward Sargent established Sargent & Brother, Co., a commission business in New York City, which they renamed Sargent & Co. two years later. The company resided in New Britain, Connecticut under the name J. B. Sargent & Co. for several years. It was incorporated as Sargent & Co. and moved to New Haven in 1864. Sargent & Co. represented and eventually purchased Peck & Walter Co. The company also represented Mallory, Wheeler & Co. until Mallory, Wheeler & Co. opened a sales office in New York City in 1870. Choosing to compete with Mallory, Wheeler & Co. and other hardware companies, Sargent and Co. expanded its own product lines from carriage and coffin hardware to locks and builders hardware.

Sargent & Co. grew rapidly from 1865, when it employed 100 people at a plant covering one acre of land, to 1887 when 1700 employees worked at facilities covering 16 acres. After the turn of the century, Sargent & Co. obtained machinery capable of a time-efficient and cost-effective method of plating hardware. This process gave the company an advantage over its competitors. Sargent & Co. also hired Henry G. Voight, prolific lock and hardware inventor, who worked for the company for more than thirty years.

In 1985, the company, a division of Walter Kidde & Co., employed 950 people. It was one of Bridgeport's largest manufacturers and one of the few remaining lock manufacturers in the northeast.

1852–88	“One of the finest collections in the field, covering a long and important – almost – half century. Ill. catalogs of various sizes in bds., cl. and wrap. SCOVILL MFG. CO.
Waterbury, Connecticut
Founded 1802.

The partnership of Leavenworth, Hayden and Scovill was formed from the assets of Abel Porter and Company. After this partnership dissolved, James M. L. Scovill and William H. Scovill formed a partnership which eventually became the Scovill Manufacturing Company. One of the earliest brass manufacturers in the United States, Scovill Manufacturing Company faced competition from less expensive brass products imported from England. In an effort to manufacture its products more efficiently and less expensively, Scovill hired James Croft, formerly employed by a firm in Birmingham, England. The combination of Croft's skills and knowledge with determined perseverance resulted in a successful firm that employed 20 people in 1820; grew to a company of 8,000 people in 1936 and employed a maximum of 15,000 people during World War I. The company expanded from brass buttons to brass butts in 1836 and also produced copper plates plated in silver for use in cameras during the advent of photography. By 1936, the yearly capacity of the company's mills reached 100,000,000 pounds.

SEATTLE HARDWARE CO.

Seattle, Washington
 Founded in 1883.

SEGAL LOCK & HARDWARE CO. (M)

New York City; Brooklyn, NY.
 Formerly the Burglar Proof Lock Co., ca. 1914–15.
 Founded in 1916 by former New York City policeman Samuel Segal, who observed that 90% of burglaries were committed by prying open doors, so invented a new type of lock based on the hinge principle.
 Originally located in lower Manhattan, moved to 55 Ferris St., Brooklyn sometime between January, 1926 and September, 1928.
 Segal Lock purchased the Norwalk Lock Co. in 1929 which continued as a division of Segal and went out of business in 1955. Segal went out of business in 1963 but the New England Lock & Hardware Co. obtained the rights to use the Segal name.
 Manufacturers of the Segal brand jimmy-proof lock.

[Catalogue No. 7]
100 pp., illus., 10 x 7, original printed wraps; covers detached.
Catalog number taken from front cover.

“In compiling this (the seventh) edition of our Illustrated Catalogue, of Weather Vanes, Bannerets and Finials, we have endeavored to include appropriate designs for Churches, Public Buildings, Residences, Stables, Barns, &c., &c., thus making it the most complete work issued . . . Our Vanes are made Entirely of Copper and Gilded with the Finest Gold Leaf, will keep bright, will not corrode, and are perfect indicators of the wind’s direction. The letters and balls are well gilded, the spires are of wrought iron, with hardened steel spindles for the Vanes to turn upon. Our Copper Eagles, from the largest to the smallest, for Vanes or Architectural purposes, are full bodied, the wings of double thickness, and are a perfect representation of the American Eagle” - from p. 1 of the catalog.

Among the weather vane designs are famous horses (Ethan Allen, George M. Patchen, Black Hawk, Dexter, Hambletonian, etc.), as well as trotters, sulkies, cows, hogs, sheep, rams, deer, pointing bird dogs, a tobacco leaf, Osceola Indian chief, fish, roosters (including a medieval example for churches), eagles (for vanes and flag poles), Goddess of Liberty, liberty cap and arrow, yachts and ships, fire engines and related emblematic vanes for firehouses, the Archangel Gabriel blowing his trumpet, sign vanes, and scroll vanes. The inside of the rear cover features stable fittings.

There were very few catalogs devoted entirely to weathervanes; Lawrence Romaine, in his Guide to American Trade Catalogs, separated them into their own separate chapter because of their "importance as a top facet in the index of American design" (p. 385). He lists three Westervelt catalogs (p. 386), including this one: "1884. New York. Catalog #7. Ill. catalog of weathervanes, crestings, stable ornaments, architectural finials, etc. Another masterpiece of 100 pp. of pls. of the finest American designs."

YALE LOCK SHOP, THE (M)

Newport, New York

Founded 1847.

Linus Yale, Sr., who opened the Yale Lock Shop in 1847, was known for inventing a pin tumbler lock (based on an Egyptian model) used for store door locks, rim and mortise night latches, cupboard, chest, desk and drawer locks. Linus Yale, Jr., who learned the art of making locks in his father's shop, closed the Yale Lock Shop in 1857, the year of his father's death.

YALE LOCK CO. (M)

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Founded 1857 by Linus Yale, Jr., who learned the art of making locks from his father, Linus Yale, Sr. In 1857, Linus, Jr. moved to Philadelphia where he opened his own business, the Yale Lock Company, which manufactured high quality bank locks. In 1861, he moved his shop to Shelburne Falls, Massachusetts where he went into business with Col. Halbert Greenleaf, opening the Yale & Greenleaf Company.

YALE & GREENLEAF CO. (M)

Shelburne Falls, Connecticut

Founded 1861.

Yale & Greenleaf Company was established in 1861 by Linus Yale, Jr. with Col. Halbert Greenleaf, who later formed a bank lock company with James Sargent (see Sargent & Greenleaf). Yale & Greenleaf Company was renamed L. Yale Jr. & Company following Greenleaf's departure in 1865.

L. YALE, JR. & CO. (M)

Shelburne Falls, Connecticut

Founded 1860.

Linus Yale, Jr. and Col. Halbert Greenleaf established Yale & Greenleaf Company in 1861. When Greenleaf left to open his own bank lock business in 1865 (see Sargent & Greenleaf), the company was renamed L. Yale, Jr. & Co. It produced bank locks, store-door locks, drawer locks, mortise night latches and cupboard locks as well as Linus Yale, Jr.'s mortise cylinder lock of 1865. The company was reorganized as Yale Lock Manufacturing Company. In 1868, Linus Yale, Jr. formed a partnership with Henry R. Towne and the company was reorganized as Yale Lock Manufacturing Company.

Ref. Hennessy.

YALE LOCK MFG. CO. (M)

Shelburne Falls, Connecticut

Incorporated 1868.

In 1868, Linus Yale, Jr. and Henry R. Towne organized a partnership named Yale Lock Manufacturing Company with the assets of L. Yale, Jr. & Company. Linus Yale, Jr. died during the same year, after which Henry Towne became president of the company. The company expanded the L. Yale, Jr. & Company's lines to include bronze builders locks, safe deposit locks, time locks, front door locks, bronze and brass doorknobs of different shapes, all offered in a variety of finishes. In 1883, the company was renamed Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company.

YALE & TOWNE MFG. CO. (M)

Stamford, Connecticut
 Founded 1883.

Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company was established with two subordinate companies, Yale Lock Manufacturing Company and Weston Crane Company, in 1883. The companies' origins are linked to the lives of Linus Yale, Sr. and his son, Linus Yale, Jr. who founded a series of lock and hardware businesses. (See The Yale Lock Shop; Yale Lock Company; Yale & Greenleaf; L. Yale, Jr. & Company and Yale Lock Manufacturing Company.) What began as a company of 30 employees in 1869 developed into a company of 900 employees by 1891. Yale & Towne continued growing and eventually employed 6000 people in 1927 when it was considered the largest lock and builders' hardware manufacturer in the country. 1882 was a significant year for Yale & Towne during which it secured its growth and success. For example, the company obtained the rights to use the Bower-Barff process, a blue-black rust-preventing finish invented by two Englishmen. The company also acquired the rights to a "sand blast" process. It hired designers and organized an art department to meet the demand for ornamental hardware. It also produced an improved corrugated key to supersede the flat key. Ten years later, the company's paracentric key superseded the corrugated key.

Yale & Towne purchased many hardware companies during its history, but one significant acquisition was Branford Lock Works of Branford, Connecticut in 1894. With Branford's stock and facilities, Yale & Towne could manufacture medium grade and cheaper lines, in addition to the high quality items it already produced.

In 1963, Eaton Manufacturing Company acquired Yale & Towne and became Eaton, Yale & Towne. Williams, a holding company that also owns Corbin and Russwin, currently owns the company.

- [1936–41] Catalog No. 28 NNERB (4)
 Builder's hardware catalog comprising separate tabbed sections:
 locks and hardware, padlocks, auxiliary locks, door closers, cabinet and trunk locks, key blanks, and stock builders' hardware.
 Title page states, "These sections can also be furnished as individual catalogs when desired."
 Paginations vary (each section is numbered separately, and some catalogs contain more sections than others), 12 x 9.
 Note: beginning with Catalog No. 28, Yale catalogs were routinely issued in sturdy loose-leaf cloth binders, thus allowing the removal of old pages and the addition of new pages. Consistent with the statement on the title page of Catalog No. 28, separately issued catalog sections in printed paper binders began to appear at this time.

A note about the assigned date of ca. 1885: most of the catalog contains traditional designs. Plate no. 8, however, features "Moderne [i.e., Art Nouveau] Drücker und Schilder," thus indicating that the catalog was probably produced in the early years of the Art Nouveau movement.
Also, the front cover mentions that Koller won the "Silberne Medaille 1880."

ca. 1775	----- (possibly Samuel Parker) [Catalog of builders’ and furniture hardware] Chippendale-style hardware: drawer pulls, escutcheons, screw studs, table butts, mantle piece knobs, bells and bell pulls, bed screw covers, tea box handles and furniture, cheese tray wheels, cup-board and cabinet hardware, clock balls (finials), table clock handles, chaise hinges, iron screws with brass heads, furniture wheels, socket casters, quadrants for bureaus, screw rings and knobs for drawers, plain round knobs, looking glass bearers, picture nails, door bolts, window sash pulleys, chimney hooks, wainscot pulleys, gun hooks, wick lamps, table locks, brass door knockers, pediment drops, and sconces. [114] leaves of engraved plates, numbered 1–112, plus 33A and 79B, including eight folding plates (nos. 33 and 106–112). 7 x 11½, contemporary marbled boards. Printed on laid paper with watermarks on seven leaves: plates 17, 48, 57, and 94 with watermark consisting of the Hanoverian coat of arms within a circle below a crown; plates 38, 43, and 77 with watermark consisting of “G R” within a circle below a coronet, the circle flanked by leafage, the whole enclosed within a larger circle. Plate no. 86 excised; plate nos. 33A, 36, and 72 clipped. “Book No. 10” penned in an old hand on the front pastedown.	NNERB

Engraved monogram, “SP” in upper margin of plate no. 1; perhaps the monogram of Samuel Parker, a Birmingham brassfounder listed on p. 10 of Sketchley and Adams Birmingham Directory 1770.

Monogram in upper margin of plate no. 1.

Note: the items in the catalog all have accompanying engraved stock numbers, but in no particular order. For example, the six drawer pulls illustrated on plate no. 1 are numbered 1153–1158; the four drawer pulls illustrated on plate no. 2 are numbered 259, 263, 264, and 265, and the two keyhole escutcheons illustrated on the same plate are numbered 389 and 414. In general, similar items are grouped together in the catalog without regard to stock numbers; the first thirty-five plates, for example, illustrate drawer pulls and keyhole escutcheons, all with widely varying stock numbers.

Ref. Crom, Theodore, An Eighteenth Century English Brass Hardware Catalogue. Crom describes and reproduces a catalog that closely resembles the NNERB copy (dubbed the “Janet” catalog by Crom).

The Brass Book by Peter Schiffer (1978), chapter 30, reproduces an unidentified brass catalog containing illustrations and stock numbers identical to some of the items in the NNERB catalog.

[316] pages of plates, numbered erratically, including four folding leaves. 24 of the leaves are loose and two of the leaves are fragments. Leaf size: 7¼ x 11¼; at the plate mark: 6 x 9½.

Some leaves watermarked "1810."

All leaves engraved both sides except the four folding leaves and one other leaf. Engraver's name ("Radclyffe") on verso of leaf no. [93]. Most plates contain numerous illustrations (over 2000 in total) and most items are identified with engraved captions and stock numbers (in no particular order). Prices (per dozen) supplied in manuscript throughout.

Three of the leaves contain relief portraits: a clock ball incorporating a portrait of King George III (leaf no. [42] recto); a clock ball incorporating a portrait of George Washington (no. [43] verso); and a bell ring incorporating a portrait of Lord Nelson (no. [93] verso).

Rebound with paper covers, housed in a black cloth fall-down-back box.

JAMES CARTLAND & SON, LTD.

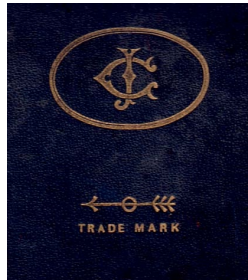

Birmingham

"Cartland was in the brass business as early in 1823, trading in partnership as Dyer and Cartland. In 1833 the partnership was dissolved and James Cartland then operated under his own name; his son John and other descendents joined the firm later and continued the business until it closed around 1955. For most of the time the company's base was on Constitution Hill in Birmingham, England.

By the 1880s, John Cartland & Son had upwards of 500 employees and was advertising as 'Cabinet, builders' and naval brass founders', one of the many branches of the brass manufacturing industry. The versatility of brass (an alloy of copper and zinc) together with its decreasing cost during the 19th century, led to its use for a huge number of applications from musical instruments to lighting and precision scientific instruments. In 1865, Birmingham, the brass capital of the world, was home to 216 brass manufacturers from all branches of the trade." – Michael Lech

THOMAS OBRIEN & COMPANY

London (Offices & showrooms: 17 & 18 Upper Thames St.)

Founded 1878. Moved from 7 Upper Thames St. to 229 Upper Thames

St. in April 1882 where a similar business had been carried on by Messrs.

Hutchinson, Batchelor & Perman, which was bought by Thomas Obrien in order to secure their premises. In April 1884 purchased no. 228 Upper Thames St.; built an additional story to those warehouses in October, 1888.

In 1890 took a building lease at White Lion Wharf, Upper Thames St. and erected two large warehouses, which opened in August, 1892; built adjoining premises in St. Paul's Wharf in 1897 and completed a third building on White Lion Wharf in 1900. Started as manufacturers in January, 1895; started as iron-founders in October, 1911 with the purchase of the Ironfoundry business of Yates,

Haywood and Co., and the Rotherham Foundry Co. of Effingham Works, Rotherham.

FONTAINE & VAILLANT (M) (Code: F.T.)

Paris

Founded 1740.

One of the most important manufacturers of builders' and decorative hardware in the world. Representing not only one of the largest and most complete collections, Fontaine today maintains a private museum in its facility directly across from the Louvre in Paris. The collection contains original bronzes and other decorative items created by famous artisans and sculptors for the company since its founding. Today, similar to Bricard (Maison Sterlin) and others, Fontaine is a manufacturer of security systems. Sole agents in the United States were Russell and Erwin Mfg. (94–98 Lafayette St. & 104 W. 40th).

- ca. 1870 - - - (J. Fontaine, Vaillant et Ferté, Rue Fontaine Molière, 13)
Album de serrurerie de luxe, composé de serrures, boutons, crémones, espagnolettes, paumelles, verroux, vases de rampes et articles d'écuries, Moyen Age, Renaissance, Louis XIII, Louis XIV, Louis XV, Louis XVI, Gothic et autres styles NNERB (2) 1 p.l., 30 tinted lithograph plates on folding sheets (14 x 19); front cover stamped in gilt, "Serrurerie ornée pour bâtiment de J. Fontaine, Vaillant & Ferté, 13 Rue Fontaine Molière, à Paris." The preliminary leaf features illustrations of locks printed in silver and gold.
Copy 1: the address in the lower margin of each plate is 13 rue Fontaine Molière.
Copy 2: an eight-page price list follows the title page: "Tarif de serrurerie de luxe . . . Rue Saint-Honoré, 181." Paper labels containing this address have been pasted over the old addresses on the title page, the first page of the price list, and in the lower margins of the plates. Address on front cover is 181, Rue Saint Honoré.
Note: the plates in the above two catalogs (Album de serrurerie de luxe, composé de serrures . . . ca. 1870) also appear in Serrurerie ornée [1880], but the plates have different plate numbers and different company names in the lower margins.
- [1880] - - - (Vaillant, Fontaine & Quintart; H. E. & L. Fontaine; H. E. L. Fontaine & Quintart)
Serrurerie ornée NNERB (4)
III. catalog of luxury hardware containing numerous tinted lithographs on folding sheets (14 x 19½), numbered variously from 1–45 (many plate numbers repeated).
Copy 1: [80] leaves of plates drawn and printed by E. Le Baron, Quai d'Orléans 2, Paris. Front cover stamped in gilt: "Serrurerie ornée, Vaillant, Fontaine & Quintart, 181 Rue Saint Honoré, Paris."
22-page price list bound in at front dated July 1, 1880: "Tarif de serrurerie de luxe, Vaillant, Fontaine & Quintart, 181, Rue Saint-Honoré, 181, Paris. . . ."
Lacking the left half of Plate 44.
- [1880] Copy 2: [103] leaves of plates drawn and printed by E. Le Baron, Paris. Front cover stamped in gilt: "Serrurerie ornée, Vaillant, Fontaine & Quintart, 181 Rue Saint Honoré, Paris." 22-page price list at front dated July 1, 1880: "Tarif de serrurerie de Luxe . . ." Small oval rubberstamp of "Edmond Plantier & C^{ie}, Lisboa" on first page of price list; new endpapers; improperly rebound—the tabs to which the plates are affixed were cut down, thus preventing the plates from opening flat.
Lacking the following 3 plates that appear in Copies 3 and 4: 20 C (Pentures et clous de porte); 39 C (Entrées, rosettes et équerres ciselées); and 39 D (Targettes styles divers).
- ca. 1880s Copy 3: [141] leaves of plates drawn and printed by Ed. Genet, Paris.

RÉMY GARNIER [Maison Garnier]
Paris (30, Boulevard de la Bastille)
Successors of Brun-Cottan Frères.

- ca. 1870-85 Cuivrerie & serrurerie artistiques NNERB
Two volumes in one:
2 p.l., 1–197; 300–347 leaves of double-page plates, 17½ x 24½, lithographed by Edm. Genet on pale pink paper; quarter morocco, covers stamped in blind.
Vol. I (plate nos. 1–197) consists of two parts: Part 1 (Cuivrerie et serrurerie de style) and Part 2 (Crémones en tous genres).
Vol. II (plate nos. 300–347) with separate title page: Articles repoussés et martelés en tôle, cuivre ou en tous autres métaux. Rosaces, feuilles, fleurs, culots, vases. Ecussons, mascarons, chimères, etc. Ornaments en tous styles et genres pour balcons, grilles, marquises, rampes, lustres, lanternes, etc. Reproductions de tous modèles anciens.

Note: the two preliminary leaves comprise the general title page and the table of contents for
Vol. I, Part 1.

An additional leaf preceding pl. 173 comprises the table of contents for Vol. I, Part 2 (crémones). Plate 300 is the title page of Vol. II.

Ref. McKinstry 1097, in which a date of ca. 1870 is assigned. However, this date can only plausibly apply to Vol. I because two of the plates in Vol. II (nos. 337 and 338: "Ornements en tôle ou cuivre pour appareils d'éclairage") illustrate ornaments for electric chandeliers and light fixtures, which did not come into existence until the 1880s. Thomas Edison's first commercially practical incandescent lamp was produced in 1879; electric light was first used domestically in England in 1880; the first International Electrical Exhibition was held in Paris in 1881; and Edison's Pearl Street Power Station (New York City) was built in 1882.

Copy 1:

Greifen und Griffe [Grasping and Handles]
 Köln: Walther König, 1986.
 79 pp., illus., 11¾ x 8¾.
 In this work, FSB's first exercise in literary self-analysis, "FSB ventures forth into the world of artefacts. With Otl Aicher leading the search, we discovered that the door handle is one of a long line of ingeniously conceived implements stretching from the primitive club to the modern steering wheel. FSB's awareness of itself and its products was radically altered." - FSB Manual, 1989, p. 2
- 1987 Aicher, Otl, Jürgen Werner Braun, and Siegfried Gronert. NNERB
Door Handles Workshop in Brakel
 Köln: Walther König, 1987.
 79 pp., illus., 11¾ x 8¾.
 In September, 1986, FSB ran a one-day design workshop attended by nine internationally recognized designers and architects and more than twenty journalists. The focus of their attention was the common door handle. Volume II of the FSB editions.
- 1988 Aicher, Otl, Jürgen Werner Braun, Siegfried Gronert, Robert Kuhn, Dieter Rams, and Rudolf Schönwandt. NNERB

PORZELLAN MANUFAKTUR NYMPHENBURG

[Nymphenburg Porcelain Manufactory]

Munich

Established 1747.

After his accession in 1745, Maximilian III Joseph of Bavaria commanded the establishment of manufacturing companies in order to bail out the state finances. Beginning in 1747, attempts were made to manufacture porcelain, and the former Neudeck Castle (in the present-day Munich suburb of Au-Haidhausen) was made available for that purpose. The experiments were a failure until 1754, when the efforts to manufacture porcelain finally began to succeed. By 1761 the manufactory had moved to the Nymphenburg Palace, where it remains today.

1831 Abbildung der vorzüglicheren Artikel der königl[ichen] bayerischen Porzellan Manufaktur NNERB
[1], 6 leaves of lithographic plates, [2] pp., 10¼ x 15¼, grey-blue printed wrappers with Greek key border, housed in a burgundy cloth folder. The unnumbered first leaf comprises an ornamental lithographic title page containing a central vignette showing a collection of Neo-classical vases, the whole framed with a repeating palmette border. A two-page printed price list is bound in at rear, 20 x 14¼.

Each plate illustrates twenty-four kinds of Neo-classical porcelain tableware and decorative items, with descriptions, including tureens, sauce boats, fruit bowls, coffee pots, vases, bidets, washbowls, night warming lamps, and candle holders.

Solon, p. 590 (three copies, all in Bavarian institutions); Champfleury, p. 122

"German hard-paste porcelain has been produced in Bavaria from around the middle of the 18th century. The first factory was established in 1747 at the castle of Neudeck by Maximilian III Joseph, Elector of Bavaria. In 1761 the factory was moved to Nymphenburg, on the outskirts of Munich, from where it still operates. Reminiscent of Meissen, the production of the Nymphenburg factory are principally recognized for their fine detailing and quality figures.

The present list principally comprises tableware and other decorative items, many in the Neo-classical style reflecting the influence of Johann Peter Melchior, who had worked at the Höchst and Frankenthal factories before joining Nymphenburg in 1800. When Bavaria was made a kingdom by Napoleon, the Neo-classical architect Leo von Klenze did not only shape the new buildings of the expanding capital, he was as well responsible for the design lines of Nymphenburg. He was followed by Friedrich von Gärtner, who maintained the Grecian style of porcelain, which is shown in this catalogue." – bookseller's catalog entry describing the NNERB copy.

Ref. Amatt 488: "Compiled by the Company's chief designer, this standard work, based on the author's previous book of 1948 [Locks and Builders' Hardware: glossary, design manufacture and history], is intended as a reference handbook for architects, builders' hardware merchants and all connected with the supply and distribution of locks. Entries range from simple 8 ward definitions, eg. 'chest lock', to articles of several pages, eg. history of locks. Includes reference to British standards. The bibliography lists 23 books and parts of books in English, plus French and German works. 507 diagrams and illustrations (including other types of hardware). Owing to demand, was reprinted in November, 1968.

Ref. Amatt 116: "This folio volume contains 15 lithographed plates of locks and keys; the rest of the book depicts communion rails, staircases, balustrades, gates, etc. The plates do not carry captions and only four dealing with locks are commented upon in the 4 pages of the preface. Most of the examples are English, but this is not made clear. The author, an architect, emphasizes the skill of manipulation of the ironworkers, and the geometrical shapes which they produce."

“As an American, I was not the first by any means to fall under the spell of French ironwork. Edgar B. Frank, George Gray Barnard, Elie Nadelman, Samuel Yellin, Albert C. Barnes, and Dominique de Menil were among my more illustrious predecessors. Indeed, many French thought Frank a native, but I had read his book, Old French Ironwork, published by Harvard University Press in 1950, two years after it had appeared in French as Petite Ferronnerie Anciennes (Editions Self, 1948) and knew that he was an expatriate living in France since 1910, when he had come over to represent an American hardware firm. A sophisticated collector and contemporary of Henri le Secq and Henry-René d’Allemagne, Frank later recounted some of his experiences with French dealers in a little-known memoir titled La Brocante sentimentale (Nouvelles Editions Latines, 1950)” – from Richard J. Wattenmaker’s introduction to Classic French Wrought Iron by Raymond Lecoq.

Ref. Amatt 147: “An English translation from the French work ‘Petite ferronnerie ancienne’ (1948). Covers locks from the fifteenth to the eighteenth centuries (Chapters 3–4), padlocks (Chapter 5), and keys (Chapter 6). Emphasis is on decoration and the skill of the French locksmith, showing the development of his art through the centuries. 31 plates. . . . The bibliography (40 items) is entirely of French works except for five books in English which are relevant to the study of locks and keys.”

Ref. Priess, p. 12: “Approximately half of the book is concerned with building hardware, primarily locks, padlocks, and keys. . . . Most of the illustrated material is relatively ornate.”

C. Hobbs being very well re-hashed. The intricacies of various famous patent locks are also well explained. No bibliography.”

Ref. Priess, p. 15: "This work is important in being one of the earliest on the subject and in the amount of information it provides. The descriptions include metals and tools and although they focus on the manufacture of various types of locks, they also include other types of building hardware and hardware for such items as wheelchairs and artificial limbs. In some instances a considerable amount of detail is provided as, for example, one chapter which lists and illustrates 74 different wards for the bit of a key."

Copy 3: rebound in antique-style full leather omitting the original English-language title page while including the facsimile of the original engraved allegorical title (probably to deceive a buyer into believing it was the 1627 edition).

Copy 4: includes a typescript note, apparently from a book dealer: "Thank you for your letter of the 26th March [ca. 1960]. I sent out two parcels by registered post a few days ago, one containing a copy of Cannell's Secrets of Houdini. All the others are related to your Wants, but the ace of all is the London 1889 reprint of Jousse's L'Art Du Serrurier of 1627. The original Jousse is considered the masterpiece of Locksmithing books. In May 1958, I obtained at auction a copy with a defective title for Bob Nelson at £50. A perfect copy has gone as high as £90 at auction ten years ago. There is a Paris 1874 reprint which I got in 1956 for £9. This is the first time that I ever found the London reprint in English, an exact facsimile of the original with an 1889 title-page added, the price being [price excised]. Even the reprints of this book are rare. The Bosch, in German, is a good book."

Ref. Amatt, p. 64: "There appeared at the beginning of the seventeenth century many French treatises on locksmithing, one in particular being now famous as the earliest known European work: 'La fidele ouverture de l'art du serrurier' published at La Flèche in 1627, which gave detailed accounts of the mechanical construction of locks; the plates from the work were reproduced in 1889."

Ref. Amatt 121: "Reprint, illustration only of the original French work published by George Griveau in 1627, the first book on locksmiths' work to appear in Europe. 'Serrurerie' encompassed all types of decorative iron work and only plates 1, 4, and 41 illustrate locks and key mechanisms. 16 other plates depict escutcheons. The original work discussed the entire trade, including the behaviour of apprentices to their masters, their treatment, tools, glossary of terms, and padlocks. The illustrations particularly are used by numerous later authorities on the subject."

Facsimile reprint of the original article published in the Bucks County Historical Society Papers, Vol. V. Ref: Priess, p. 17: "This is one of a small number of studies from the early 20th century providing a discussion of nails, screws, hinges and thumb latches. Most of its conclusions should be considered as dated; a number are inadequate, and others have been shown to be incorrect. Unfortunately, it has been used even recently as the major, if not the only, source for the interpretation of building hardware from some archaeological sites. It can be read for historical interest but many of its conclusions should no longer be taken too seriously.”

Moxon, Joseph. Mechanick Exercises, or, the Doctrine of Handworks, from Jan. 1, 1677 to Feb. 1, 1677 and is Intended to be Monthly Continued. London: Printed for Joseph Moxon, 1683.

Ref. Amatt 324: “Describes, in the section on ‘smithing’ how to make (by forging and rivetting) various types of locks (eg. stock locks, chamber door locks) and the keys to suit, giving, with the aid of diagrams step by step instructions, eg. the chiselling of intricate wards in the key bit. As far as this section is concerned, the later editions of the work reprint the first edition of 1683 word for word.”

Wing M3013 (v. 2 covered by M3014?) Vol. 1, without general t.p., consists of 14 numbers with title pages dated 1677-1680; v. 2, with t.p. dated 1683, consists of 24 numbers without special title pages. Vol. 2 has title: Mechanick exercises, or, The doctrine of handy-works, applied to the art of printing. Vol. 1 treats of smithing, joinery, house-carpentry, and turning. Vol. 2 was probably completed during the summer of 1684. Cf. 1962 ed. of v. 2 by H. Davis and H. Carter, p. xlix. Vol. 1: [6], 242, [8] p., excluding frontispiece ports., title pages of numbers II-XIV, and 18 “plates”; v. 2: [4], 394 p., excluding [2] leaves of ports., 33 “plates” and missing final leaf (probably blank). Some of the “plates” in each vol. are conjugate with leaves of text. LC copy bound in 1 v. Plate 10 of v. 1 is bound out of order, facing p. 175. Plates 10 and 24 of v. 2 are misbound in v. 1, facing pages 83 and 213 respectively. Frontispiece in v. 1 is mounted. Provenance: Oscar Aurelius Morgner (ex libris); Carl W. Jones (book label). Marketing advice for dealers and salesmen, including information about different kinds of displays, advertising, etc. With two-page cover letter (Aug. 16, 1923) announcing a campaign "of such far-reaching importance and so permanent in character, that the word 'campaign' as used by the average manufacturer is quite inadequate to convey to you what we have planned and are about to put into effect. Briefly summarized, the work consists of bringing (with your assistance) to the knowledge of your customers the fact that the average lock applied to the average door should be reinforced by a burglar-proof Yale Guard Lock. . . . within the last few years . . . a large class of expert crooks with good mechanical knowledge, good tools, and a complete disregard for life itself, have come into the field, and have made a complete revision of lock security not only advisable but necessary. . . . As a result of this condition, we have brought out the Yale Guard Lock Line, of which the leading lock is our No. 92. . . ."

Amatt 174: "A brief history of pocket watch keys from the seventeenth century; early specimens are quite rare, and can be dated reasonably accurately, unlike those of the nineteenth century when dating becomes vague and uncertain; keys illustrated (2 plates) include a group symbolizing trades and occupations, some attached to seals and lockets, and those with precious or semi-precious stones. The author states that little is to be gained by attempting to fix dates to keys, and the best clarification is based on ornamental type or character of workmanship; neither, in her opinion, is chronological arrangement of importance. Over 80 examples are illustrated. Very little published information is available on this aspect of the subject."

The lock, shown in diagrammatic form, is made precisely on the principles of the modern Yale cylinder lock, the only difference being that in the Roman lock the key, after being inserted in the slot, is lifted upward in order to raise the tumblers and the bolt is then slipped back with the other hand; in the modern Yale lock the key, when turned, lifts the tumblers and releases the bolt. A diagram of the much older Egyptian lock, employing the same principles, is illustrated for comparison."

Ref. Amatt 185: "The author draws attention to the lack of literature on old keys for the collector, and attempts to remedy this omission; he gives a brief history of keys from Egyptian times and gives details of Roman examples, which were the earliest to be found in Great Britain. At the beginning of the 13th century, the coming of the key as a commonplace article seems to have occurred in France, England, and Germany. From the 15th century on, unmistakable signs of artistic improvement was discerned in the work of English locksmiths. A final paragraph deals with the cleaning of old keys; early keys should only be cleaned superficially, but commoner keys of the 18th century should always be freed from rust. "Samuel Sloan, a prominent Philadelphia architect, began a journal in July 1868 entitled The Architectural Review and American Builders' Journal, the first journal of its kind in America, and it served as a voice for the American Institute of Architects (AIA). He presented various issues most relevant to the architectural world at that time. Sloan formatted the journal into a series of divisions addressing these many topics. These include a "Descriptions" section showing pictures of certain buildings being constructed or proposed at the time, such as the West Spruce Street Church, and describing them; a gazetteer filled with technical information regarding joinery, crafts and how-to articles; and various theoretical editorials or general commentaries by Sloan." - <http://www.brynmawr.edu/iconog/uphp/ARABJ/ARABJ.html> (accessed 5/20/13).

The Iron Age: A Review of the Hardware, Iron and Metal Trades.

[Publication history, as explained in the Jan.–June, 1916 issue (Vol. 97), p. 108: "Sixty years ago, in the summer of 1855, the first issue of what is now The Iron Age came from the press. Started in Middletown, N.Y., as the Hardware Man's Newspaper, it was first known as The Iron Age in April 1859. For fifty years thereafter the iron and steel and hardware trades were represented by this journal, for most of that period a distinct hardware department being maintained, having its own editorial staff. Six years ago it was decided that the hardware merchant interests could best be served by a separate journal, and thereupon began the vigorous career of the Hardware Age, which today, with the same publishers, is successfully working out its destiny alongside The Iron Age."]

Completed in manuscript, including purchases of jugs, butter pots, pitchers, flower pots, and chambers (at 25% discount) in the amount of $34.36 by Mess. Samson Goodman's Co., signed by George B. Rockwood for Julius Norton (owner).

Bommer Spring Hinge Co., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Glass paperweight, ca. 1893. Text embedded in base of paperweight: "Bommer Spring Hinges Are the Best. 'Practically Unbreakable' Says the World's Fair Award." Rectangular with rounded corners, 2½ x 4.

The Brainerd Manufacturing Co., East Rochester, New York

Mimeographed letter to customers, 1 p., Brainerd letterhead, Aug. 20, 1917, quoting in full: "We are writing you calling your attention to the fact that it is extremely difficult to get raw material from any source of supply at this time. Three and four months is a very short time to secure material from mills now and as soon as a million men are drafted, to a great extent from the industries of the country, it will be more difficult. We suggest anticipating your wants and placing your orders as soon as possible."

Mounted to p. [102] of Brainerd scrapbook.

Location: Brainerd catalogs, aisle 17, case 1, shelf 3.

Branford Lock Works, Branford, Connecticut

Trade card from the Centennial International Exhibition held in Philadelphia, 1876 (100th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence). 2½ x 4¼, green card stock.

Request for Information about
Hardware Study Collections

This request form seeks to identify the location of historic building and cabinet hardware collections that might provide a resource for exhibitions and/or the research of architectural and decorative arts historians, historic preservationists, reproduction hardware designers, museum professionals, and others. The survey is limited to unattached hardware that is no longer part of an historic building, period room, or piece of furniture. The information you provide on this form will be used to develop a listing of hardware study collections in the United States and abroad. Your assistance and time in responding to the questions is greatly appreciated. Thank you.
